GRADUATE CERTIFICATE OF EDUCATION (MENTAL HEALTH)

This course takes a Design Thinking approach to analyse issues and challenges faced by persons with mental health challenges. It focuses on problem-solving, informed by advanced theoretical knowledge, from a person first perspective. The person first approach allows situations to be tackled from the perspective of the individual, and by doing so shifts the focus from a passive acceptance from the person at the centre of the issue to a more active role where their individual needs are actively considered.

MASTER OF PHILOSOPHY EDUCATION

The Master of Philosophy in Education develops your research techniques and methodologies and critical evaluation skills. You will undertake independent supervised research within the context of your discipline and will develop a sound knowledge of your research subject, and demonstrate evidence of independent thought and high-level communication skills.

MASTER OF EDUCATION (SPECIAL EDUCATION)

This course thoroughly prepares educators to support individuals with a range of special educational needs in mainstream classrooms and fills a much-needed gap in professional development for teachers in the field. We use a Design Thinking approach to analyse issues and challenges faced by persons with a range of additional learning needs. In particular, it focuses on problem solving, informed by advanced theoretical knowledge, from a person first perspective.
